

The Lodge at Woodloch is Named One of National Geographic Traveler's

Chosen Hotels in its Annual Stay List for 2009

Hawley, PA.

April, 2009 -The Lodge at Woodloch, a destination spa, in Hawley, PA, has been identified as one of National Geographic Traveler's preferred hotels on its prestigious "Stay List." The Lodge is one of 129 properties chosen for having meaningful spirit and a unique vibe.

In the second annual "Stay List," The Lodge at Woodloch is praised for its extraordinary natural setting which is infused into the spiritual awakening experience. The magazine identifies guests' continuous immersion in nature, complemented by upscale room amenities.

"We are so pleased with our inclusion on such an esteemed and well-researched list. National Geographic Traveler readers seek an inspiring vacation experience, and we certainly offer that and more to our guests," said Founder and Owner Ginny Lopis.

The Lodge at Woodloch's distinctive "Awakening" philosophy permeates each aspect of a guest's experience, from spa treatments, lectures and creative discovery programs to cuisine and fitness activities. The spiritual mindset, which has been meticulously conceived by Owners/Founders John and Ginny Lopis, facilitates a deep sense of self-awareness and inner wisdom, enabling guests to become more intuitive and skillful in their decision making.

For the April issue's "Stay List," industry experts, veteran journalists and local authorities nominated their selections for properties that possess a pure sense of place. The 129 chosen hotels pertain to a variety of genres, but all share a common characteristic-authenticity and definition of their surroundings.
